Some people really enjoy it

Of course, you're free not to join and do other stuff instead, but it's not cool to ruin it for everyone else.

well, first of all, thats all i see on forums, is that, secound of al, it already has enought attention, and third of all, so many forumers that are new don't get reconized has much, becuase, there are some people that come on here only for ggad, and fourth of all, new forumers may feel left out beacause no one gives their rps a chance, and it makes them think its them, and it's really bc everyoe else is all caught up in ggad and their own fanticies, and ive scowered the forums, and seen multipul times where new forumers leave bc they fell like everyone is ignoring them

I could be wrong, but I don't know anyone who is here only for GGaD?

all of those problems were around well before ggad, and they'll be around well after it's gone

I'm sorry, but you can't blame GGaD for being the entire cause of forumers leaving. Of course, it's mostly the first things they see, but that's not because they're leaving when they feel everyone is ignoring them. They first need to get used to the place and know what will or will not grab other forumers attention. And also, sometimes they aren't active enough, so that's why they think others are ignoring them. And if new forumers make new RPs and their own stories, it needs to capture the eyes of those interested, plus needs to be carefully thought out and planned, instead of having short descriptions and others. They have a chance to do their RPs, but it needs to be done well or else no one will join. I don't speak for others, but not everyone is caught up in GGaD.

Ignore me if you want if I seem whatever to you, but let's not make this a flamewar. You have your opinions, and others have theirs. I know it looks like GGaD is mostly on the front page, but you don't need to start having a fit with it, possibly causing a flamewar. That's the last thing we need.

There are plenty of other RPs that get recognized.

Dismay, I do not at all understand your logic. GGaD does not at all make people not try out different rps, it just gives people something to enjoy. Hardly any people are here only for GGaD, and forumers are still recognized despite GGaD. I have never seen an introduction thread where someone is announcing their arrival to the WoFMB that has gone unnoticed, and never because of a popular FWRP.

I am extremely confused, and this is somewhat ridiculous. There is more to the forums than GGaD, and people don't get 'caught up in GGaD and their own fantasies,' and even if they do, they don't let other people feel left out.

Maybe if you would at least visit the sign up thread for GGaD, you would see that it is actually a great and very interesting FWRP, and that someone has put a lot of work into this, and they wouldn't like their work to be undermined because someone says that 'it's all they see on the forums' and that 'it already has enough attention' and that 'people are all caught up in GGaD and their own fantasies' and 'they don't give new forumers a chance.'

Maybe every other post is a bit of an exaggeration? I only see it every fifty posts or so. THERE IS A LOT MORE THAN JUST GGAD. Everyone knows what it is, but it does not overshadow much.

I understand that GGaD seems oppressive, almost. However, none can deny it is a well-thought out, if not great, idea, for a FWRP. Every MB is defined by some characteristic--it happens that FWRPs and RPs are defining traits for many MBs, and is one for the WoFMB. We as forumers all know that someday another FWRP--or FWRPs--will come and surpass GGaD, or perhaps, it will just fade out. However, it is still going, and as such, there is no right for anyone to want it to deplete. When the time comes for it to go, it will go.

Besides, I believe your claims are incorrect. It may be some threads, but there are many others, such as other FWRPs, RPs, chat threads, summoning threads, and such. One can put it this way--let us pretend you made a FWRP, and seeing posts like these wishing the FWRP would be gone. How would you feel? Very great, I suppose? I know the answer is "No", judging from what you are saying.

In short, what I am saying is before making flippant remarks such as these, please consider the credibility of your statement, the general flow of forum activity, and general respect for those who had/have made hard work on such a project, FWRP or something else.
